Home Decorating Tips for Welcoming
Eid al-Fitr

Eid al-Fitr is around the corner, it's a day almost everyone has been waiting for long to meet and gather with their big families. To welcome the holy day and build up Eid ambiance, decorating your home would be a good start. These are five tips to decorate your home, keeping your home cozy, neat, and clean during this big day.

1. Rearrange Home Appliances

Do you know that rearranging your furniture or home appliances can give a different mood? You can reset the order of home appliances ranging from rooms, living rooms, to the kitchen. With a new placement, it probably would make your home looks even more comfortable. You can also prepare a special space to carry out Eid prayer with the family. By doing so, celebrating Eid at home will still give you a festive atmosphere that you always feel each year.

2. Repaint the House

The next one is to repaint the house. Well, this seems a bit hassle but it really will create a different look and atmosphere to the whole house. You can choose the color that suits you best and paint with different colors in each room. Painting the house with bright colors can also build up a cheerful mood for the people who are livin in the house. However, if you want warm and cozy settings, earth tone colors will be right for you.

3. Use Green Plants As Additional Decoration

Do you want a distinct and up-to-date home environment? It's time for you to give a touch of green plant ornaments! You can choose whether you want to use real plants or synthetic plants. Adding some greenery gives a relaxing mood and definitely aesthetically pleasing. Don't forget to adjust the place with the pot of plants that you want to buy. Don't make room looks full and crowded by installing green plants. Try to put these extra decorations in the living room or family room.

4. Install Natural Lighting

It's undeniable that lighting is an important aspect of the room layout. By adjusting the natural lighting that comes from the sun, you can save energy cost and natural lighting that enters the house will also give a good effect for the house residents.

Natural lighting plays a pretty important role in your daily life, by increasing productivity, providing a more good mood, and overcoming insomnia.

5. Choose Eid-themed Displays

If you think those four aren't enough, this is really what you should do to create the Eid atmosphere at home. Buy some Eid-themed displays to use at home and install it around your home to make your Eid al-Fitr day even more festive. You can use a Middle Eastern-style aromatherapy lanterns, diamond-shaped handicrafts that you can hang on the wall, or if you want to be more different, you can buy a miniature mosque, and make DIY hampers at home.

The three-day celebration of Eid al-Fitr – otherwise known as Sweet Eid – unites Muslims around the globe as they observe the end of the sunup to sundown period of fasting known as Ramadan. Food is a staple of the Eid celebration, as families and friends come together to enjoy an elaborate and exquisitely prepared feast in each other's company. Here is just a selection of the best Eid al-Fitr foods and dishes from around the world, sweet or otherwise.

Recipe

Eid al-Fitr Foods and Dishes From Around the World

1. Morocco: Laasida and Tagine.

Super Easy Pea and Mint Soup

Sweet, velvety, and bright, pea and mint soup is a refreshing starter for the holiday meal. You can use frozen peas for this rustic soup that comes together easily on the stove-top, and finishes in the blender. Garnish with freshly cracked black pepper and Parmesan cheese for fantastic first course. The soup can be made and chilled up to 3 days ahead, and leftovers taste great warmed up or eaten cold.

2. India, Pakistan, Bangladesh: Sheer Khurma

For Eid al-Fitr, in countries such as India, Pakistan and Bangladesh, it's typical to indulge in a creamy dish known as sheer khurma (or korma/kurma). The milky dish – made of toasted vermicelli-esque noodles, known as seviyan (or seaiyan) – is sometimes topped with almonds or includes dried dates. This sweet offering is sometimes known as shemai and is considered one of the most popular and auspicious Eid dishes.

3. Indonesia: Lapis Legit

Influenced by the country's history of Dutch colonisation, Indonesia often tucks into a particularly delicious sounding thousand layered spice cake to celebrate the end of Ramadan. Known as lapis legit, it is also a dish that remains popular in the Netherlands (albeit under the name of spekkoek) and is perhaps one of the most time-consuming Eid dishes; each layer is made from poured and broiled batter, before being assembled into the finished product.

4. Afghanistan: Bolani

Eid in Afghanistan is a primarily child-oriented celebration, which involves many special festivities specifically designed for the youngest members of the household. However, the food remains a family affair, and one of the most traditional Afghan dishes at this time of year is bolani, a flatbread stuffed with either leafy greens, such as spinach, potatoes, pumpkin or lentils. As one of the few savoury dishes enjoyed for Eid, the bolani definitely merits a spot on this list.

5. Palestine, Syria, Lebanon, Egypt, Iraq: Butter Cookies

We've called them butter cookies, but that's really their closest English-language equivalent. A favourite in Palestine, Syria and Lebanon, countries where Eid continues to be observed despite horrific levels of violence, the Palestinians know them as graybeh and include either pine nuts or almonds in the recipe, while in Syria and Lebanon, they are called mamoul and typically feature walnuts or dates. Iraq knows them as klaicha, while Egypt is also partial to a similar cookie, called kakhk, this time filled with a honey-based stuffing.

6. UK: Biryani

In the UK, one of the most popular Eid dishes is easily a classic biryani, which brings together meat and rice in a highly flavoured, heavily spiced dish. While chicken is typical, it's not uncommon to see a whole spectrum of meats used for the Eid biryani, from mutton and lamb to goat, although fish is a lesser spotted protein of choice. Served with raita (cucumber, mint and yoghurt dip), salad and pickles on the side, it's easy to see why this is a year-round favourite in the UK too.

7. Malaysia: Rendang

While Eid al-Fitr is actually known as Hari Raya in Malaysia, there are still plenty of traditional dishes associated with the celebration, the most notable of which is the spicy coconut curry known as rendang. While beef may not be popular for the UK biryani dish, it's the main ingredient in Malaysia's popular Eid dish, also enjoyed in Indonesia (the country from which it originated) and the rest of the Malay diaspora, which includes Singapore, Brunei, parts of the Philippines and, of course, Malaysia.

8. Russia: Manti

Russia is another country that marks Eid al-Fitr with some suitably delicious dishes, and while Russian cuisine as a whole doesn't exactly have the best reputation, this is one offering you'll want to try. Known as manti, which are basically stuffed dumplings, they contain either seasoned lamb or beef, and these savoury bites often form the base of the Eid feast in Russia. However, the recipes can vary from region to region, so you might never find two that taste the same.

9. Yemen: Aseeda

Sometimes known as aseeda, as well as aseeda, this Yemeni jelly dessert, which doesn't look dissimilar to a Mexican flan, is also enjoyed in Saudi Arabia, Sudan and Libya. Aseeda, made primarily from wheat and honey, is regularly savoured in and amongst the traditional Sudanese Eid festivities, which include paying house calls and accepting sweets from their neighbours, and is typically served boiling hot and eaten fast! Bint Alshahan is also popular in Yemen.

Did U Know ?

“Vesak Day”

Vesak also known as Buddha Jayanti, Buddha Purnima, and Buddha Day, is a holiday traditionally observed by Buddhists in South Asia and Southeast Asia as well as Tibet and Mongolia. The festival commemorates the birth, enlightenment and death of Gautama Buddha in Theravada, Tibetan Buddhism and Navayana. The name Vesak is derived from the Pali term vesakha or Sanskrit vaisakha for the lunar month of Vaisakha, which is considered the month of Buddha's birth. In Mahayana Buddhist traditions, the holiday is known by its Sanskrit name (Vaisakha) and derived variants of it.

Although Buddhist festivals have centuries-old tradition, the first conference of the World Fellowship Buddhists held in Sri Lanka in 1950 formalized the decision to celebrate Vesak as the Buddha's birthday across multiple Buddhist countries. The resolution that was adopted at the World Conference reads follows.

That this Conference of the World Fellowship of Buddhists, while recording its appreciation of the gracious act of His Majesty, the Maharaja of Nepal in making the full-moon day of Vesak a Public Holiday in Nepal, earnestly requests the Heads of Governments of all countries in which large or small number of Buddhists are to be found, to take steps to make the full-moon day in the month of May a Public Holiday in honour of the Buddha, who is universally acclaimed as one of the greatest benefactors of Humanity.

The month of May usually has one full moon, but as there are 29.5 days between full moons, occasionally there are two. If there are two full moons during the month of May, some countries (including Sri Lanka, Cambodia and Malaysia) celebrate Vesak on the first full moon, while others (Thailand, Singapore) celebrate the holiday on the second full moon. The difference also manifests in the observance of other Buddhist holidays, which are traditionally observed at the local full moon.

On Vesakm devout Buddhists and followers alike assemble in their various temples before dawn for the ceremonial and honorable hoisting of the Buddhist flag and the singing of hymns in praise of the holy triple gem: The Buddha, The Dharma (his teachings) and The Sangha (his disciples). Devotees may bring simple offering of flowers, candles and joss-sticks to lay at the feet of their teacher. These symbolic offerings are to remind followers that just as the beautiful flowers would wither away after a short while, and the candles and joss-sticks would soon burn out, so too is life subject to decay and destruction. Devotees are enjoined to make a special effort to refrain from killing of any kind. They are encouraged to partake only of vegetarian food for the day. In some countries, notably Sri Lanka, two days are set aside for the celebration of Vesak, and all liquor shops and slaughter houses are closed by government decree during the two days.

Also birds insects and animals are released by the thousand in what is known as life release to give freedom to those who are in captivity, imprisoned, or tortured against their will. (The practice, however, is banned in some countries such as Singapore, as released animals are unable to survive long-term or may adversely impact the local ecosystem if they do.

Some devout Buddhists will wear simple white clothing and spend the whole day in temples renewed determination to observe the eight precepts.

Devout Buddhist undertake to lead a noble life according to the teaching by making daily affirmations to observe the Five Precepts. However, on special days, notably new moon and full moon days, they observe the eight precepts to train themselves to practice morality, simplicity, and humility.

Some temples also display a small statue of the Buddha in front of the altar in a small basin decorated with flowers, and filled with water or sweet tea for devotees to pour over the statue. This is symbolic of the cleansing of a practitioner's bad karma, and to reenact the events following the Buddha's birth, when devas and spirits made heavenly offerings to him.

Devotees are expected to listen to talks given by monks. On this day, monks will recite verses uttered by the Buddha twenty-five centuries ago to invoke peace and happiness for the government and the people. Buddhists are reminded to live in harmony with people of other faiths and to respect the beliefs of other people as the Buddha taught.

“International Firefighter’s Day”

International Firefighters’ Day (IFFD) is observed on May 4. It was instituted after a proposal was emailed out around the world on January 4, 199 due to the deaths of five firefighters in tragic circumstances in a bushfire in Australia.

On December 2, 1998, a tragic event shook the Lindton Community, Australia and the world. Firefighters in Linton, Australia, a populated region in Victoria, were fighting a large bush fire and called for mutual aid. This urgent mutual aid call brought the Geelong West Fire Brigade to the scene, not knowing the despair and tragedy that was in store. Garry Vredeveltd, Chris Evans, Stuart Davidson, Jason Thomas, and Matthew Armstrong all loaded into company's truck. They were part of a strike team and were being sent to help extinguish the flames. As the five headed into the hot zone, the wind suddenly switched direction, engulfing the truck in flames and killing all five members. This unfortunate incident is what inspired JJ Edmondson to bring about an international holiday, called International Firefighters’ Day, to support the lives lost and dedicated fire fighters who risk their lives every day to save life and property.

One of the most significant symbols of International Firefighters’ Day is the red and blue ribbon. This ribbon is cut precisely five centimeters long and one centimeter wide, with the two separate colors conjoined at the top. JJ Edmondson chose red and blue because the red stood for the element of fire whereas the blue would represent the element of water. Coincidentally, red and blue are also the colors recognized world-wide to signify emergency services; therefore, red and blue being the best choice of color to recognize an international holiday.

The ribbon is traditionally worn on the lapel-otherwise known as the fold of fabric on a shirt- but is not limited to that certain spot. Some people may also put it on their cars visors, hats, hang them in windows or off of car mirrors, or even hang them from trees in their front lawn. The places this ribbon can be placed are plentiful. The red and blue ribbon is a simple but yet effective way to show support for International Firefighters’ Day.
