The Indonesian Independence Day is fast approaching, so why not take this opportunity to follow the theme and have some fun celebrating. From watching the flag ceremony to trying out new food! Here is the ideas to celebrate this year's Indonesian Independence Day with your kids and the whole family. Merdeka!

- Try new Indonesian food everyday for a week (culinary experience)

Exploring the Indonesian archipelago in a week may be difficult, but it's easy if it's a culinary experience! Introduce the kids to new flavors every day of the week of August 17th and tease their taste buds with a plethora of spices. Though Indonesian food is famous for being spicy-hot, there are many kid-friendly, non-spicy options too. Make it a game and use an Indonesian map to pick which areas to try next.

- Enter local Independence Day competition

Every year on Indonesian Independence Day the local authorities would organize competitions for kids and teens. These games include sack racing, rope pulling, cracker eating, and money more. Kids love participating in these events as they spent an exhilarating time with friends and family. One especially noteworthy competition would be a pole climbing race called Panjat Pinang. This game existed even before Indonesia's independence and is quite a sight. Tall poles covered in grease are erected with prizes at the very top, and kids and teens would compete to climb up in hopes to be the first to reach their coveted prize and win it.

- Wear red and white outfit for the day: match the Indonesian flag colors

Match your outfit with the Indonesian flag colors: bravery red and purity white on August 17th , the Indonesian Independence Day. Not only does it make your day more festive, but dressing up for the occasion often gives you a financial advantage as well. Watch out for Independence Day promotions at the malls and restaurants. They usually give special discounts If you wear red and white on the day.

- Bike around Jakarta and see the festivities

Independence Day celebration means a lot of Indonesians will be out to join the festivities. Go ahead and cycle arounf the neighborhood and you might just spot some interesting sights. Independence Day competitions, small bikes fully decorated with red and white paper and more. Some interesting spots would ne the National Monument (Monas) area and the Old Town (Kota Tua) area. Either way, this day is a great day to go out and bike around with whole family.

"Activity Ideas for Celebrating Indonesian Independence Day with Kids"

- Watch a flag ceremony at the Presidential Palace

The National Independence Day Flag Ceremony or Upacara Kemerdekaan Indonesia is held annually at Istana Merdeka (Independece Palace). Attended by the President himself, the ceremony includes the reading of the Independence Proclamation Text exactly at 10 am. Indonesia's best students are chosen to carry the flag. Once chosen, they go through rigorous training just for this event. The national anthem, Indonesia Raya, will then be played by the music corps of the army and police combined. Also not to miss os the fly-past by the airforce and music by the national orchestra, Gita Bahana Nusantara. The current President, Joko Widodo, has set a new trend to wear one of the Indonesian traditional outfits.

"Popular Indonesian Foods You can Make at Home"

Home to a variety of herbs and spices, Indonesia has so many delicous foods to offer. The rich ethnicities and the tradition of passing down signature recipes from generation to generation have blessed this country with an unlimited amount of dishes that range from traditional to popular, to easy-to-make. You can find all the ingredients for these dishes at your nearest shops. In case, you can't find an ingredient at your nearest store, you can replace it with a substitute and give the recipe your own twist.

Nasi Goreng

A highly-versatile dish, Nasi Goreng (fried rice) is an Indonesian dish that has its roots in Southern Chinese culture. It mainly consists of seasoned rice stir-fried with pieces of meat and vegetables. This dish originated from people's concern about ways to use leftover rice. It is not clear exactly when the Indonesians adopted the recipe of Chinese fried rice and put their own traditional 'twist' on Nasi Goreng, but some say it happened around the 10th country, during Sriwijaya's reign when the trade between Indonesia and China flourished.
Nowadays, almost every region in Indonesia had its own signature recipe of Nasi Goreng (such as Nasi Goreng Jawa, Nasi Goreng Aceh, etc) and you can find it in almost every corner of every street. As mentioned before, this dish is very versatile, which means if you are having trouble finding one or two ingredients, you can always twist the recipe by using alternative ingredients that suit your taste and are easily available.

Ingredients

- 300 g long-grain rice, cooked and then cooled overnight
- 3 tbsp vegetable oil
- 4 large egss, beaten
- 1 tbsp sweet soy sauce
- 1 tbsp soy sauce
- A pinch of salt
- Pieces of finely-chopped protein, like chicken breast, meat, shrimps, or anything you prefer

Spices

- 200 g finely-cut shalots
- 20 g finely-chopped garlic
- 20 g finely-chopped spring onions (or you can substitute it with leek or chives)
- 3 red chilies, finely chopped

How to make

- Stir-fry all the spices in vegetable oil until fragrant.
- Then add the beaten eggs and pinch of salt and stir well.
- Before the eggs get cooked, quickly add the proteins and the rice that was cooled overnight. Stir again for a while.
- When the flavors start combine with each other, add the soy sauce and sweet soy sauce and stir well.

Rendang

Originating from the land of Minang in West Sumatra, Rendang has gained popularity worldwide because of its distinctive savory flavor. This dish is basically made of slow-cooked, braised pieces of beef that are caramelized in coconut milk and a rich mixture of spices. Rendang is tradionally served by Indonesians to honor guests at festive occasions such as wedding celebrations and Eid-al-Fitr. The tradition still exists, but now you can find Rendang at almost every Minang restaurant in Indonesia. A little patience and diligence is required to cook this dish, but you can find all the ingredients at your nearest Asian markets. This one-of-a-kind dish will put your skills to a test.

Ingredients

- 1 kg beef
- 3 cups coconut milk
- 3 stalks lemongrass
- 4 kaffir lime leaves

Curry paste

- 200 g galangal, cut into small pieces
- 4 large cloves garlic, finely chopped
- 100 g of shallot, finely chopped
- 2 tbsp coriander seeds
- ¼ tsp turmeric powder
- 2.5 cm piece fresh ginger
- 1 tbsp coconut sugar
- 2 tbsp coconut oil

How to make

Prepare all the ingredients. Cut the beef into 4-cm squares that are about ½ cm thick. Blend all the curry paste ingredients together until smooth. Saute the curry paste with coconut oil until fragrant and then pour coconut milk into the wok. Bash the lemongrass stalks and add to the wok. Stir well and then add the beef. Cook over medium heat and bring the coconut milk to a boil before reducing the heat to a simmer. Add a little water every once in a while whenever the stew is about to dry. Cook until the meat is tender and the color turns dark brown (estimated time: 3 hours).

"Popular Indonesian Foods You can Make at Home"

Bakso

Essential comfort food that you can find almost everywhere in Indonesia, from street-vendors to five-star hotels and high-class restaurants. Bakso is brothy meatballs that are usully served with noodles, chilli paste, and spring onions. There are may ways to prepare Bakso but all the variations include meatballs and broth. Many regions of Indonesia give their own twist to Bakso, for example, Bandung make 'bakso cuanki' and Malang make 'bakso bakar' (grilled meatball dish with broth).

Ingredients

- 5 pounds beef bones
- 1 knob ginger, peeled
- 4 cloves of garlic, smashed
- 2 inch piece cinnamon
- 3 cardamom pods, pounded
- 3 cloves
- 6 black peppercorns
- 18 meatballs
- 3 cups egg noodles, cooked
- ½ cup crisp-fried shallots

How to make

Put the bones in a pot and add some water. Bring to a boil and take off any scum that rises. Add the ginger, garlic, cinnamon, cardamom, cloves, and peppercorns to the broth. Simmer for at least two hours, then strain the broth and pour back into the pot without the bones and aromatics. Heat the broth and bring to a simmer, then add the meatballs. Divide the noodles among three bowls. When everything is ready, pour the hot broth and meatballs directly into the bowls. Top each bowl of meatballs with crisp-fried shallots.

Martabak

Martabak are savory light bites that originated from a Middle-Eastern recipe of the same name. It is basically a spicy omelet pancake stuffed with bits of vegetables and minced meat and can be bought from almost any street vendor in Indonesia after sunset. There is also another general variant of Martabak called Martabak Manis which is basically a large pancake stuffed with toppings like chocolate, chesse, and peanuts. It might look complicated, but it's actually very easy to make and the ingredients are available at many shops near you.

Ingredients

- 250 g minced beef
- 1 medium onion, peeled and sliced
- 1 spring onion, finely sliced
- 3 eggs
- 1 tbsp curry powder
- ½ tsp cumin powder
- Salt and white pepper

Dough

- 100 g plain flour
- 25 g tapioca flour
- 250 ml cold water
- ½ teaspoon salt

How to make

Filling:
Saute onion in vegetable oil for a couple of seconds. Add the meat and stir fry until it changes color. Then put in leek and continue sauteing for 2 or 3 minutes before adding curry powder, cumin, salt, and pepper. Mix all the spices and cook for 3 minutes. Remove from heat. Put the fillings in a bowl and add the eggs and spring onion. Mix well.

Dough:
Mix all the ingredients in a bowl until they blend completely with any lumps. Then pour 2-3 tablespoon of batter into a pre-heated, non-stick frying pan. Make sure the dough covers the whole surface of the pan. Remove when it's done.

Martabak:
Put 2 teaspoons of filling onto the center of the dough, take the skin and fold in from side to side to completely cover the filling in an envelope fashion. Fry until it turns golden brown on one side and then turns it over to cook the other side. Serve warm.

“INTERESTING FACTS ABOUT INDONESIAN PROCLAMATION MOST PEOPLE DON’T KNOW”

As we know, Indonesia has been independent for quite many years. Of course, many national heroes went through struggles to liberate Indonesia from colonizers. Not only the struggle, but Indonesia’s independence was also achieved with great sacrifice. So, we should pay our respects and say our prayers to many heroes that brought freedom to Indonesia. But do you know that there are some interesting facts behind the dramatic Indonesian proclamation of independence.

Well, these facts about the Indonesian proclamation of independence are anot only interesting but also unique. So, let’s take a look at the following facts that you might not know yet.

1.The Original Indonesian Proclamation Manuscript Was Lost

Before the reading of the Indonesian proclamation of independence, the text that was supposed to be read by Soekarno could not be found. Fortunately, it turned out that Sayuti Melik had made another copy. So, Soekarno finally read the copy of the manuscript.

Surprisingly, the original manuscript was found in a trash can by a journalist named BM Diah. Eventually, the original manuscript was copied and handed over to the government in 1992.

2.Sutan Sjahrir’s Version of the Proclamation Manuscript

Until now, we know that the proclamation text was written by Soekarno and Mohammad Hatta the night before the proclamation. However, Soekarno-Hatta’s version of the proclamation text was not the first manuscript.

In fact, Sutan Sjahrir had also co-written the proclamation text. As quoted by Rudolf Mrazek in an interview with Sutan Sjahrir, Sutan Sjahrir’s version of the manuscript contained about 300 words and didn’t mention the Dutch and Japanese occupations at all. Instead, it primarily focused on the fate of all Indonesians at that time.

3.Soekarno Was Sick Before Reading the Indonesian Proclamation

Unknown to many, Soekarno had malaria symptoms before reading the proclamation text. Only 2 hours away before reading the Indonesian proclamation, Soekarno was still fall asleep in his room with a very high body temperature.

Soekarno’s personal doctor then came and gave him medicine. Luckily, Soekarno could wake up at 9 AM. Ultimately, Soekarno read the proclamation text of Indonesia’s independence.

4.The Original Indonesian Flag Was Made From Cloth Given by a Japanese Commissioned Officer

Some stories mention the original Indonesian flag was made from a white bed sheet and a rec cloth from the Soto roadside stall. But it turned out that Soekarno’s wife named Fatmawati sewed the first red and white flag using the cloth given by a Japanese commissioned officer.

According to the 1978 book Catatan Kecil Bersama Bung Karno, when she was nine months pregnant, Fatmawati said that she was given a white and red cloth by a Japanese officer in October 1944. The officer was Chairul Basri, who received the cloth from Hitoshi Shimizu, Head of Sendenbu or Propaganda Department. In the end, with that cloth, Fatmawati sewed the first Indonesia flag using handheld sewing machine.

5.Approached by Japanese Army After the Indonesian Proclamation

Shortly after the Indonesian proclamation text was read by Soekarno, it was reported that the proclamation place was immediately visited by 3-5 Japanese officers.

It was reported that these Japanese officers intended to forbid Soekarno from reading the Indonesian proclamation of independence. Thankfully, Soekarno’s bodyguards could drive away these Japanese officers.

6.The Recording of Indonesian Proclamation Is Not the Original Sound

On every Indonesian Independence Day, you must be familiar with the reading of the proclamation text by Soekarno. Yet, do you know that the recording that you usually listen to was not Soekarno’s original voice when he read the proclamation text for the first time?

Actually, the recording that you can find nowadays is a recording of the proclamation text read by Soekarno in 1951, which was then sent to Lokananta Records in 1959. It was because there was no official documentation during the reading of the proclamation text in 1945.

7.Coronation of Soekarno and Mohammad Hatta as National Heroes

Although Indonesian independence had been proclaimed in 1945, it took a long time for both Soekarno and Mohammad Hatta to be crowned as Indonesian national heroes.

Due to the ever-changing political dynamics and other things, the inauguration of Soekarno and Mohammad Hatta as Indonesian national heroes only took place in 2012 by Former President Susilo Bambang Yudhoyono.

Even more surprising, the title of Indonesian independence proclaimer was only given to Soekarno and Mohammad Hatta in 1987, about 42 years after Indonesian Independce Day.

“EXCITING GAMES TO CELEBRATE INDONESIA’S INDEPENDENCE DAY”

The holiday celebrates Indonesia’s independence from Dutch colonial rule. The day is referred to by Indonesians as Tujuhbelas Agustus (17th of August) or Hari Merdeka (Independence Day).

Preparations for the patriotic celebrations begin 2-3 weeks before the 17th August. High-rise office buildings around town sprout large banners or lighted designs, fences around the presidential palace and many government offices are draped in red and white bunting, malls are decorated in red and white.

The most solemn ceremony is the flag hoisting at the Natioinal Palace, televised live. Full of pomp and circumstance and conducted basically the same way each year, it ceremonies are led by the President and Vice President, and attended by the cabinet, military brass, family members of the current and preceding president, diplomatic corps and honored guests.

While the solemn ceremonies are taking place, neighborhoods gear up for fun and games for the kids. These popular games played to celebrate Indonesia’s Independence Day :

- Panjat Pinang (Climbing Nut)

Requiring both skill and determination, Panjat Pinang is an excting game played during Indonesia’s Independence Day celebrations. It requires a group of participants to climb an Areca Palm tree and reach the prizes at the top. Sounds easy, but it’s quite a challenge. Participants must climb up a tree that is covered in oil, making it difficult to reach the top. This tricky yet hilarious activity brings laughter and cheers as participants fall down or claim victory.

- Balap Karung (Sack Race)

Balap Karung is another popular game played to celebrate Indonesia’s Independence Day and consists of kids racing to the finish line with their legs inside a sack. Surprisingly, this game does not originate from Indonesia. It started when the Dutch colonized Indonesia. The Dutch often played this ga,e at their institutions, competing with both their fellow citizens and the Indonesian.

- Makan Kerupuk (Cracker Eating Contest)

Kerupuk, a salty, savory snack, is not only a perfect side dish served with Indonesia Fried Rice, but also an item used in the well-known game Makan Kerupuk where the participants have to eat the kerupuk as fast as they can. This game holds great historical significance. During the colonial period, Indonesian soldiers were faced with scarcity of food. Eating rice with kerupuk was nothing less than a treat for them. Hence, Makan Kerupuk is a reminder for every Indonesian to be grateful for the freedom struggles of their ancestors.

- Balap Bakiak (Bakiak Race)

Balap Bakiak is a unique traditional game that requires a team to wear the same pair of bakiak and race to the finish line. Bakiak is a traditional Central Javanese wooden sandal having straps made out of used tires and this conventional footwear is easy available at Malioboro Street. Originating in the 1970s, in West of Sumatra, Balap Bakiak is an activity that’s a favorite of both youth and old.

- Tarik Tambang (Tug of War)

Tarik Tambang involves two teams, with 5 or more participants. Two teams compete on two opposite sides and all attendees clutching a rope. In the middle there is a barrier of line. Each team trying to pull a rope as hard as possible so that opposing teams passing through a boundary line. Any team interested in passing the borders declared lost. Tactics game lies in the placement of players, tensile strength and footstool defense on the ground. In general, the player with the greatest strength is placed at the end of the rope, to old the end of a rope or hit the last time upon withdrawal.

- Balap Kelereng (Marble Race)

Though Balap Kelereng has been played for several decades in Indonesia, kelereng or marbles originated in Egypt around BC and grew popular in Asia between the 16th to 19th century. This game requires the participants to carry a marble on a spoon in their mouth and they have to keep this tiny item steady as they race to the finish line.
