SPECIAL MENU

“CHINESE SPRING ROLL”

A traditional food popular in many regions of China, spring rolls (Chun Juan), aka egg rolls in American English, are one of the most sought after dishes in overseas Chinese restaurants. Essentially, they are deep fried, cylinder-shaped parcels made of golden, crispy wrappers and tasty filling of various ingredients. Here the tips for non-greasy spring rolls:

- Make sure the filling isn't too wet. Otherwise, the wrappers might tear allowing excess oil to go inside.
- Deep fry when the oil reaches the right temperature. If too low, the rolls will soak up too much oil. If too high, the out layer will brown too quickly while the inside remains uncooked.
- Use an air fryer if you wish to reduce oil usage. The result isn't exactly the same but definitely good enough.

INGREDIENTS :

For the wrappers :

- 15 large flour-based spring roll wrappers (25 X 25 cm)

For the filling :

- 200 g minced pork/chicken/beef
 - 120 g shrimp, shelled and cubed
 - 120 g carrot, grated
 - 130 g bean sprouts
 - 100 g Chinese chives, cut into sections (or finely shredded cabbage)
 - 6 shiitake mushrooms, thinly sliced
 - 2 stalks scallions, finely chopped
 - 100 g dried mung bean vermicelli, rehydrated and cut into sections
 - 2 eggs

For the seasoning :

- 2 tablespoon oyster sauce
- 1 teaspoon sesame oil
- ½ teaspoon salt
- ½ teaspoon sugar
- ¼ teaspoon ground white/black pepper

For frying :

- Cooking oil for deep frying

For dipping sauce (optional) :

- 2 tablespoon white rice vinegar (or fresh lemon / lime juice)
- 1 teaspoon light soy sauce
- 1 pinch sugar
- 1 cloved garlic, minced
- Fresh chili pepper, finely chopped

INSTRUCTIONS :

- Ready-made spring roll wrappers usually come frozen. Defrost in the fridge the night before.

Mix the filling :

- Put all the ingredients for the filling into a large mixing bowl (NB: leave out one egg yolk for brushing the wrappers).
- Add all the seasonings. Mix until well combined (it's best to do so with your hands, wear kitchen gloves if available).

Assemble the rolls :

- Gently separate the spring roll wrappers one by one. Remember to always cover them with a clean damp cloth as they dry out easily.
 - Place one wrapper on a flat surface with one of the four corners facing towards you. Put about 3 tablespoon of the filling above the closest corner. (Use a spoon to help shape it into a rectangle).
 - Lift the closest corner to wrap the filling then roll it to the half-line of the wrapper. Try to wrap it as tight as possible without leaving any air pockets inside. But be gentle during this process to avoid tearing.

- Lightly press two ends of the filling then fold the left and right corners of the wrapper towards the middle.
 - Roll the cylinder until only a triangle is left at the top. Brush a layer of egg yolk over the triangle. Roll again to seal completely. Repeat to assemble all the rolls.

Option 1 : Deep fry the rolls

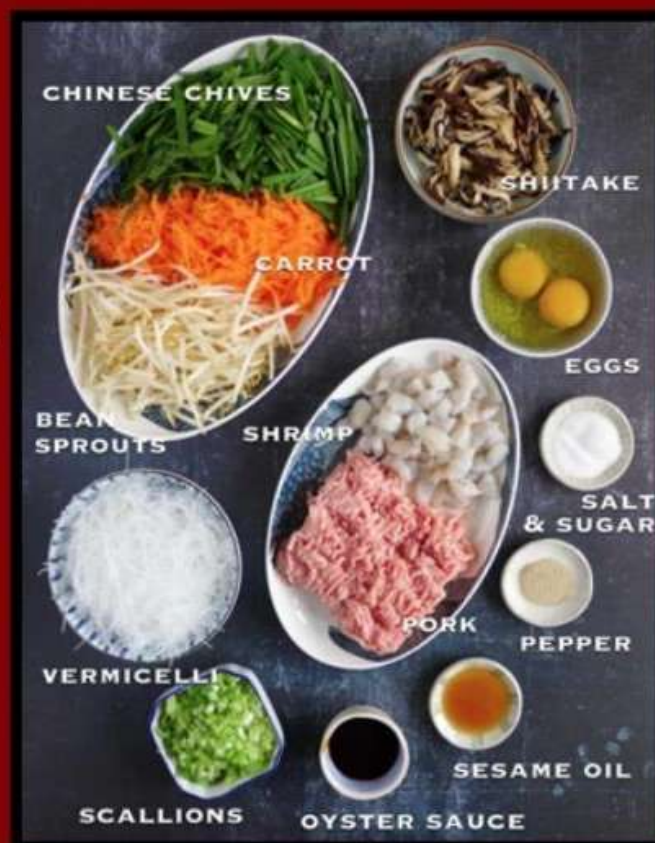

- Heat the oil for deep frying until it reaches 180o C. Gently slide in the rolls one by one (do not overcrowd. Fry them in batches if necessary).
- Fry over medium heat. Flip over over a few times to ensure even browning. When they become golden, transfer out to a tray lined with kitchen paper to absorb excess oil.

Option 2: Air fry the rolls

- Preheat the air fryer at 200o C for 3 minutes. While waiting, brush a layer of oil all around the spring rolls.
- Put the rolls over the crisper tray of the air fryer in a single layer. Leave to cook for 8-10 minutes. Then flip over and cook for a further 5 minutes until they become golden.

Notes :

- If your spring roll wrappers are of a different size, please adjust the filling volume and frying time accordingly.
 - Here are two vegetarian / vegan substitutes for the regular oyster sauce: vegetarian oyster flavored sauce and mushroom vegetarian stir fry sauce. Gluten free oyster sauce is also available.
 - Use neutral cooking oil that has a high smoking point

“CHINESE YEAR OF THE DRAGON”

The dragon is the fifth zodiac animal in the 12 year Chinese calendar. In traditional Chinese culture, the term “zodiac” refers to a repeating cycle of 12 years in which each year is represented by a particular animal. In China, “zodiac” is usually referred to as “shengxiao”, literally meaning “born resembling”. As this term suggests, the Chinese zodiac animals are similar to the star signs that are more commonly used in western culture. That is to say that certain personal qualities are associated with the people born during a particular zodiac year. For instance, those born during the Year of the Ox are thought to be hard-working and honest. In the order that they appear in the cycle, these 12 animals are: Rat, Ox, Tiger, Rabbit, Dragon, Snake Horse, Goat, Monkey, Rooster, Dog, Pig. These animals are honoured in celebration every Chinese New Year.

In traditional Chinese culture, the dragon typically embodies the qualities of power, nobleness, leadership, honour, luck, and success. In fact, the dragon is often considered the most highly revered zodiac animal of all. Many years ago, it was even commonly thought that the Emperors of enormous dynasties were reincarnations of dragons.

Because of these many positive attributes associated with the dragon, in recent years there has been a considerable spike in birth rates during the Year of the Dragon. This is the result of families planning to have their child this year in the hope that they’ll be born with the positive characteristics associated with the dragon. That said, there are also some negative qualities associated with the dragon. It’s thought that they can often be considered impatient and hotheaded.

Dragons are one of the most respected and admired animals in China. Traditionally, dragons are symbol of power and strength. They are also strong and independent. Although they may look fearsome, dragons were also seen as loving and kind creatures in Chinese myths. A little bit different to the idea we have of scary, fire-breathing dragons in Western culture. According to Chinese mythology, dragons lived with humans to protect and guide them after humanity was created.

“CHINESE YEAR OF THE DRAGON”

Chinese people refer to themselves as descendants of the dragon because the first Chinese imperial dynasty was said to have originated from dragons. The myths say that dragons were present when the Earth was created. One of the goddesses, called Nu Kua, was part of the dragon herself. She created land and made four pillars to hold up the sky. Each of the pillars had a dragon on top to hold the weight of the heavens. Nu Kua was also the creator of humans, meaning Chinese people have a direct link to dragons right from the start of their existence.

Interesting facts about Chinese dragons :

- Chinese dragons come in many forms, such as a snake-like creature, a turtle-like or fish-like creature.
- Chinese dragons don't exist in real life. These mythical creatures are found in many paintings and people's imaginations.
- As water-dwelling creatures, Chinese dragons live at the bottom of the seas, rivers and lakes.
- Chinese dragons are believed to control the weather, so they are blamed for causing natural disasters like tidal waves, storms and floods.
- Dragons appear in many Chinese proverbs and idioms, such as 'A dragon among men', which means someone who is very talented, or 'Paint the dragon, dot the eyes', which means adding the finish touch to something.
- Chinese dragons are found throughout the country, with China being the country with most places named after dragons.

“FUN FACTS ABOUT CUPID”

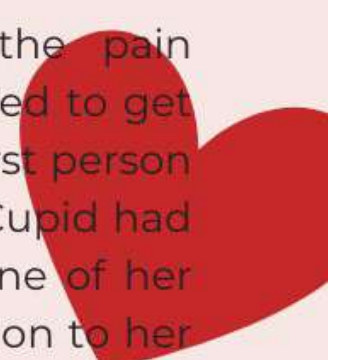

In Latin, Cupid goes by two names that have different origins, but whose meanings are both associated with love. One of Cupid's Roman name is Cupido. This form means 'desire'. If we stop to think about it, regardless of our age, the people we love deeply are ones we enjoy and desire to be with as much as possible. Cupid's other Latin name is 'Amor'. Two of the major planets in our solar system bear the names of Cupid's mother Venus and his father Mars. Although Cupid is never seen, when the weather conditions are exactly right, both of these planets can be seen in the sky after dark or whenever a planetarium is open to visitors.

In Greek Mythology, Cupid was known as 'Eros' who was portrayed as slender young boy with wings; however, following the Hellenistic Age that ended about 31BC when Rome conquered Greece, he was portrayed as the chubby little boy we are most familiar with especially around Valentine's Day. In both Greek and Roman mythology, Cupid always had a bow and arrow which he used to shoot the power of love wherever he wanted it to go. Some early artists picture Cupid as being blindfolded. According to Shakespeare, the reason was because as a chubby little boy, Cupid often changed his feelings about things especially those having to do with love.

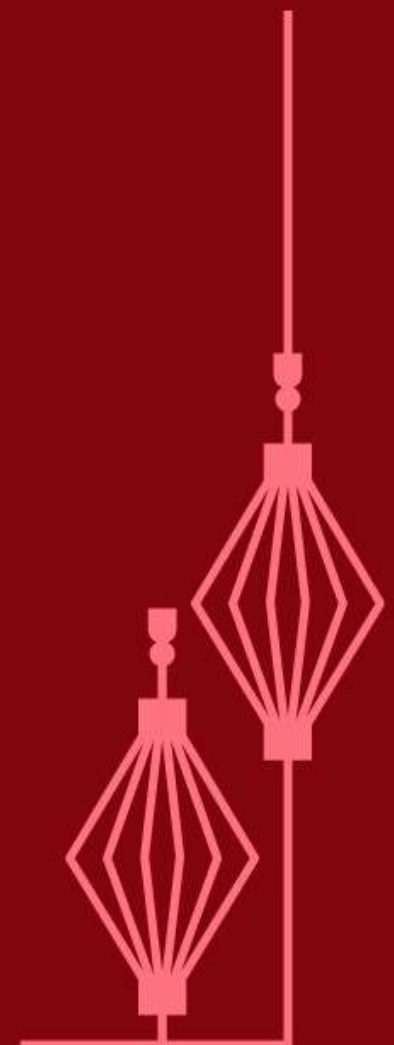

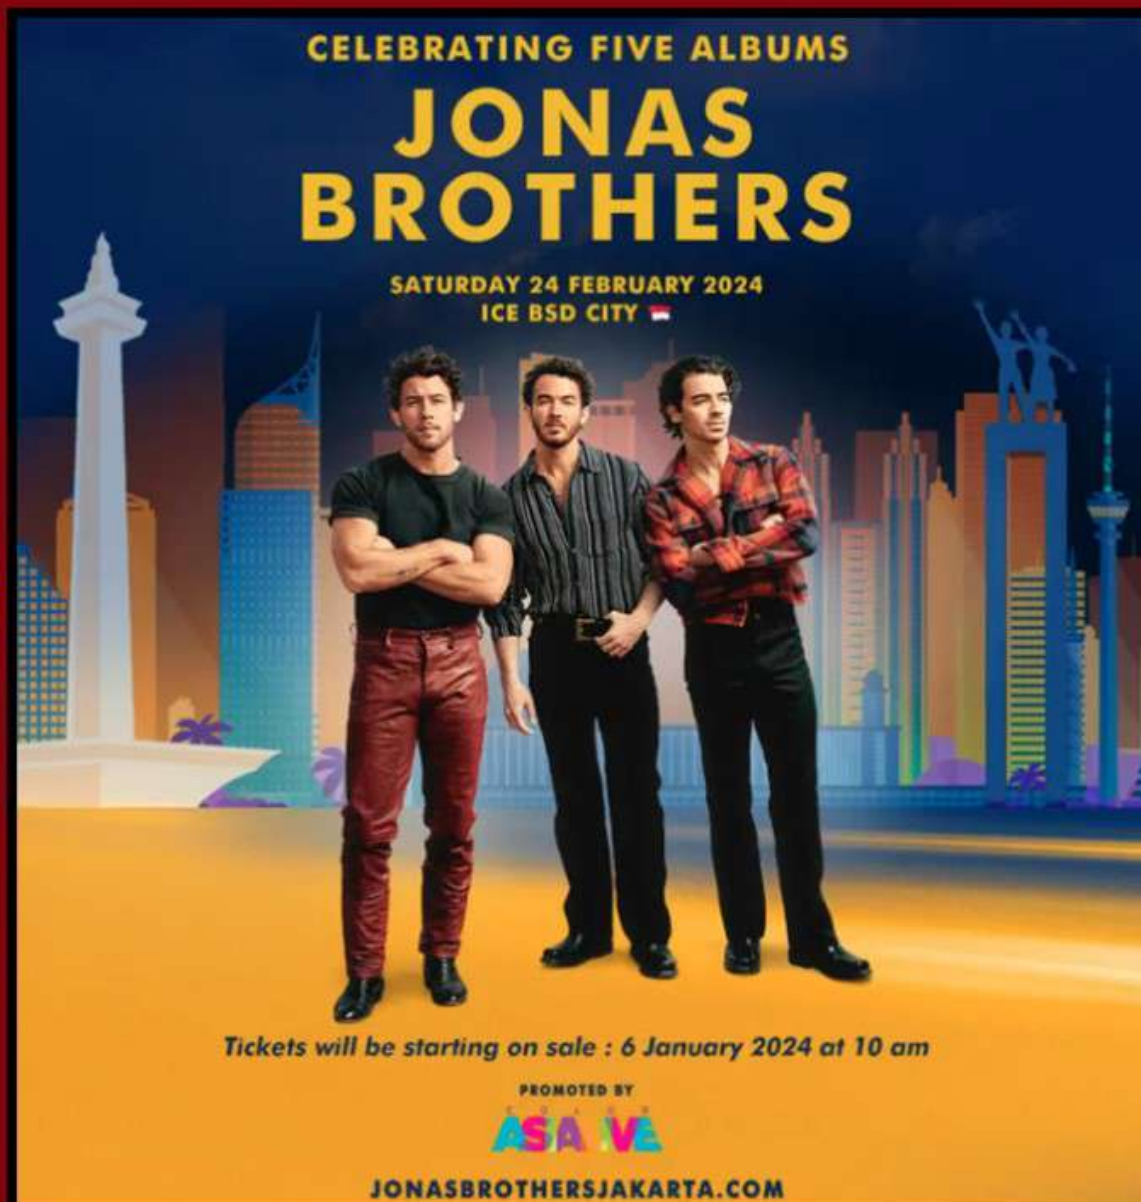

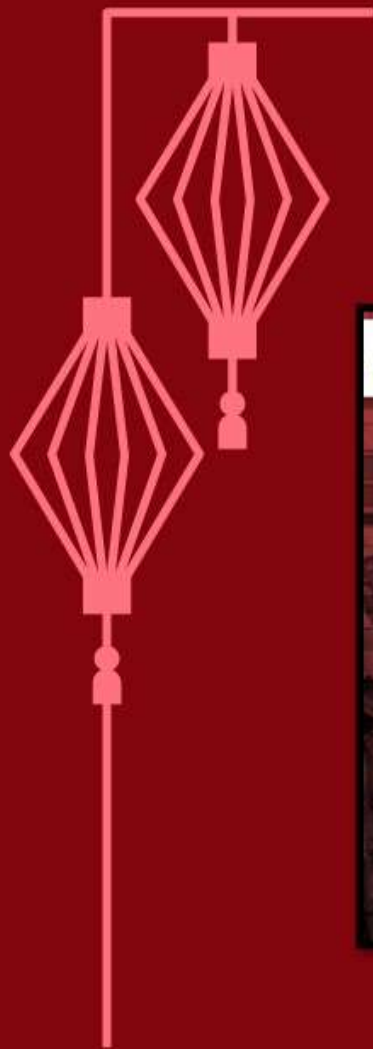

Although Cupid is portrayed with a bow and arrow, most people don't know that he actually had two arrows or perhaps one arrow with two very different tips. If he fired the gold one which had a very sharp tip, the female heart where it landed was immediately filled with love and the desire to be with a certain male forever. Shakespeare's words about Cupid changing his mind apply to the blindfolded Cupid and his use of the blun-tipped lead arrow. Whether male or female, when the lead tip struck a heart the message was that one person in the relationship wanted to end it and be free from that person forever so another relationship could be started.

According to some writings, Cupid personally experienced the pain associated with the lead arrow as a child. As a small boy Cupid tried to get some honey out of a bee hive and was stung in the process. The first person Cupid wanted help and comfort was his mother. In one account, Cupid had a girlfriend named Psyche who led a very lonely life because none of her female friends like her and none of the male gods paid any attention to her until she met Eros. Despite the fact that they were both very lonely, according to the story they lived happily ever after together.
